VISITING CANADA REGULATIONS

Visitando las regulaciones de Canadá

Every year, more than 35 million people travel to Canada to enjoy the many opportunities the country has to offer, besides<sup>1</sup> visiting family and friends.

If you want to visit Canada, you must first find<sup>2</sup> out if you need a visitor (or a temporary resident) visa.

Many people do not have to apply for<sup>3</sup> a visa<sup>4</sup> to visit Canada. These include most European citizens, for example Italians, and United States citizens and permanent residents. However, they must carry proper identification for themselves and all children travelling with them. They mustn't stay longer than six months. Moreover, if they want to travel to Canada for reasons different from business or pleasure, for example for study or temporary work, they must apply for a visa anyway<sup>5</sup>.

Some nationals (China, Indonesia, Thailand, Taiwan or Philippines) don't have to apply for a visa if they are on transit<sup>6</sup> to the USA, but they must have a valid USA visa.

If your state is not included in the list of exempted nationals or you are a stateless individual you mustn't try to enter Canada without a visa, even if you are in transit to another country. You have to decide which visa is suitable for your trip: are you going to Canada as a tourist, a visiting relative or a business visitor? In fact, visa application procedures vary according to the type of visa.

All visitors must have a valid individual travel document, such as<sup>7</sup> a passport; be in good health; convince an immigration officer that in their country of origin they have ties<sup>8</sup>, such as a job, home, financial assets<sup>9</sup> and a family, that will take them back; convince an immigration officer that you will leave Canada at the end of your visit and have enough money for your stay.

After your arrival in Canada, you mustn't apply later than 30 days before your status<sup>10</sup> expires if you wish to change your Canada visitor status: extend your visit or stay; change the type of permit you hold (for example, from a student to a work permit); change a condition of your permit (for example, if you are studying and you want to change schools, or if you are working and you want to change your job).
